

Likert Scales

These likert scales can be used to support your service users to communicate whether they do or do not want to do something. They can also be used to communicate if they like or dislike something.

They are great for people who are non-verbal as they can point, eye-point or gesture in another way where on the scale they are feeling. They can also be used with more verbal clients to confirm what they have said if their speech is sometimes unintelligible.

If you concerned at all that you may not have understood what your client has wanted to communicate please use a scale like this to support them as fully as possible to communicate their wants, needs and emotions.
